Luca Francioso received the M.Sc. in Physics 2001 at the University of Lecce. Since 2001 he joined the Institute for Microelectronic and Microsystems of the Italian National of Research Council (C.N.R.-I.M.M.) in Lecce (Italy) in the Sensors and Microsystems group, working in the field of silicon micromachined systems and solid state chemical sensor as researcher. In 2006 he take the PhD degree at with a thesis on application of miniaturized gas sensors for combustion and cabin air quality control in the automotive field; from 2008 he gained a researcher permanent position in the same institute, working in the field of MEMS technology, FEA simulation and sensors engineering ,wearable energy scavenging devices. He coordinated the Sensors and Microsystems group MEMS activity in GOODFOOD IP FP7 project and different national and regional projects. He's author of more than 68 scientific publications on national and international journals, and many communications and invited talks to international conferences.
